BY HUMANITAS.

A son of the writer,—a member of an evangelical Church,—having asked his permission to enlist in the service of his Country, as a soldier, he felt it his duty to withhold his consent, his reasons for which are given in this little poem. He has published it in this form at the earnest request of several esteemed friends, and sincerely hopes it may induce to more careful thought upon the subject of which it treats, and throw some new light upon the path of those who are anxiously asking, "Lord, what wilt thou have medo?"

Go, my son? No, never, never! while shall beat this heart of mine, For I hear a voice from heaven, all whose teachings are divine,— It bids me "love my enemies"—it bids me "bless my foes,"—(1) To "pray for those that hate me," and my wishes who oppose: Should I say go, my darling,—cause your brothers' blood to flow,— The Savior, whom I love so well, would be displeased, I know; No "patriot" blood ran in his veins—He lived and died for all,— I'd rather you would follow Him—THAN HEED YOUR COUNTRY'S CALL.

What if the world shall place the brand of coward on your brow, Because you will not buckle on your Country's armor now, And say that with her enemies you are in sympathy? "Twere better so than you to God a "traitor" e'er should be: Then ask me not if I'll consent—that I can never do, Since man to man has proved so false—and God alone is true:—(2) God is no "patriot"—His love extends alike to all.—(3) I'd rather you would hear His voice with a province of the country of the state of the country of the I'd rather you would hear His voice than heed your Country's call.

A little while and we, my son, must at the Judgment stand With all whose lot has e'er been cast in this most favored land; Where each must give a strict account for his part in this war, And every life he helped to take must answer then therefor.

O, how could we the Judge confront on that most solemn day, If on our hands is found the blood of one we've helped to slay; The thought of such a scene as that my spirit doth appall;—
O, hear the voice of God, my son,—NOR HEED YOUR COUNTRY'S CALL.

Remember he has said, my son, "Vengeance belongs to me,"
And "I'll avenge each deed of wrong which men may do to thee!"—(4)
O, then commit thy foes to Him who knows what they deserve,
And he will surely punish them, while He will thee preserve.
Then ask me not, my darling boy, if I will let thee go
Where brother daily brother meets, and deals the deadly blow;
I'd rather you would follow Him who DIED TO SAVE US ALL
Than disobey His gracious words—AND HEED YOUR COUNTRY'S CALL.

"Tis true as when 'twas uttered,—eighteen hundred years ago,—
"No man can serve two masters," (5) son, and we shall find it so;
And if we choose to follow men—who'll sure lead us astray—
Then we to God must answer for it in the great reckoning day.
"Tis better we should hear His voice who'll always lead us right;
Who'll keep us, if we trust in Him, e'en in the darkest night;
"Without whom not a sparrow, even, to the earth can fall."—(6)
0, love and trust in Him, my son,—nor heed your Country's Call.

LINES FOR

*THE & LITTLE & MAN.

ISAIAH A. HATCH, South Wellfleet Mass.

Age, 54 Years; Height, 3 feet, 7 Inches; Weight, 80 Pounds.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Matheir 25-40.

The world's a mighty thoroughfare,
Whose hosts keep step and time,
In the ceaseless round they measure,
To a chorus, grand, sublime.
Telling of countless heroes,
Whose days of service o'er,
Their feet have climbed the lookout,
Above the conflicts roar.

Still there is room for workers,
Hard-handed sons of toil,
Who wield the axe and hammer,
And till the fertile soil;
Out in the broad, free country,
Or in the crowded mart,
Each one must bear his burden,
And act a willing part.

I cannot join the toilers,
The busy hurrying throng,
Who gild the hours of labor,
With merry jest and song;
'Mid months and days increasing,
Each marked with care and pain,
I watch the hours drag slowly on
Their dreary lengthened chain.

In childhood's sunny morning,
Life's journey just begun,
Its battle fields before me,
With victories all unwon,
Twas then God's finger touched me,
Wherefore, I cannot tell;
I only say in meeknsss,
"He doeth all things well."

1160

300

It brought me months of anguish,
It sapped life's hidden spring,
And left me tottering onward,
A weak, misshapen thing;
To bear along my pathway,
A hard unyielding cross,
Amid the gold of manhood,
A lump of useless dross.

Our household chain was broken,
The bright links dropped away,
'Till in the village churchyard,
Five cherished sisters lay;
My mother swiftly followed,
She climbed the golden stair
Content to enter Heaven,
And find her loved ones there.

Then fell a veil of darkness
Before my father's sight,
That left him groping blindly
'Mid shadows of the night,
These feeble hands must lead him
A little farther on,
Towards where the sun is shining,
In one eternal morn.

Then help him, stalwart brother,
His path is long and steep,
And cold across the evening sky,
The long grey shadows creep.
Behold the gracious promise!
In letters fair to see!
Help "the least of these my brethren,"
And "ye've done it unto me."

Sisters, whose hearts are tender,
Be loyal to your name;
Remember an immortal soul
Dwells in that shattered trame.
Help this poor wand'ring pilgrim,
A little step along,
For surely, deeds of kindness,
To woman's self belong.

All ye who have been prospered
With mercies falling free,
Share with this fellow traveler,
And blessed shalt ye be.
Please not to count the charities
From basket, or from store,
Augels will keep the record,
Upon the other shore.

The Little Man.

ISAIAH A. HATCH, SOUTH WELLFLEET, MASS.

Age 53 years; Height, 3 feet, 7 inches; Weight, 80 pounds.

You who are blessed with health and friends, Come listen to my mournful tale; He who these blessings to you sends, Has made me thus,—so weak and frail.

Full fifty years has passed away,
And I am here a helpless man;
To you my looks must now portray,
As words and actions never can.

Once I was made a mother's pride,
In innocent and boyish glee;
I looked up standing by her side,
And caught the smiles that shone on me.

My heart was full, light and free,
As any loving child's must be;
Disease came on, two weary years,
Left aching hearts, made floods of tears.

A childish form was racked in pain,
Nature could not a stature gain;
Life knew slightly of a hope to live,
A manly form she could not give.

Totured by pain and changed by sickness long,
I'm yet a prisoner by their chains so strong;
I cannot change this scale of mortal woe,
Since wisdom best, to me has willed it so.

Now friends behold in humblest mien,

A wreck that floats upon the sea of fate;

While noble hearts my sorrowing state have seen,

Back of those dark shadows nature cannot screen.

I claim a modest feeling when I ask,
That you take pity on my crippled state;
And while to me it is a harder task,
This story of myself to relate.

I ask you this to read, give alms at sorrow's door, By buying one of these,—I ask no more.

before using a Stamp sticker having never been used, it is necessary: to unscrew the apparatus at the place marked A (see drawing), and to plunge the piece marked B, on which is the buffer covered with velvet, in a glass filled with water and to leave it in for 4 hours, — so as to allow the felt to be well soaked. After that time serew it on again, having previously half-filled the handle or reservoir with water and use it as explained above. The Stamp sticker is always ready for use, even if it has not been used for 6 months, provided water has always been kept in the handle.
